OVERVIEW OF MUSLIM FAMILY LAWS & PRACTICES

(Updated as at 31 May 2017)

Family Law Matter	Description
	Legislative Framework	Case Law	Policy	Procedure	Practice
Equality of spouses in marriage Is there a Constitutional provision on equality and are there exceptions? Are there specific laws that recognise marriage as a partnership of equals i.e. are family laws and/or other laws relating to marriage and family relations codified or uncodified? If codified, what are the titles of all the applicable laws? If codified, do these laws apply to all citizens irrespective of religion? If not, do these laws apply to all Muslims or are there different codified laws for different sects within Islam? If uncodified, or if codified laws do not sufficiently address a particular issue, how is the issue addressed e.g. what Muslim school of law is ap-	Article 12 of the Constitution guarantees equal protection of all before and of the law on the basis of religion, race, descent or place of birth.<sup>2</sup> Gender equality is not specifically mentioned. Article 12(3) of the Constitution allows for different personal laws based on religious belief.<sup>3</sup> With the exception of Singapore's Muslim minority community, marriage and family relations of all communities in Singapore regardless of religion are governed by the Women's Charter which exclusively recognise civil marriages.<sup>4</sup> The Administration of Muslim Law Act (AMLA) is the main codified	Cases relating to marriage and family relations of Singapore's non-Muslim majority population are adjudicated by the Family Justice Courts. The Civil Courts have repeatedly characterised civil marriages as involving an equal partnership of efforts by both spouses and referred to marital union as "marital enterprise".<sup>9</sup> For instance, in NK v NL,<sup>10</sup> the court	Singapore has reservations to Articles 2(a)-(f), 16(1)(a), 16(1)(c), 16(1)(h), 16(2) and 29(2) of CEDAW.<sup>13</sup> The Government of Singapore in its 2015 report to the CEDAW Committee explained that:<sup>14</sup> <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>The principle of equality before the law is enshrined in Singapore's Constitution; Singapore does not have specific</li> </ul>	Muslim parties may choose whether to seek redress in the Shari'ah Court or Civil Court in post-divorce related matters i.e.: (i) child custody, care and control and access; and (ii) division of matrimonial assets. Nationality rights Does a wife have the right to confer her citizenship on foreign husbands and children? Can the nationality of an adult woman be arbitrarily removed because of marriage or dissolution of marriage or because her husband or father changes his nationality? Applicable CEDAW Provision Article 9 Para. 6 GR21	A Singaporean man may pass his nationality to his non-Singaporean wife under Article 123(2) of the Constitution.<sup>116</sup> The Constitution does not specifically provide for a Singaporean wife to confer her nationality to her foreign husband. The foreign husband of a Singaporean woman may acquire Singaporean citizenship through registration or naturalisation.<sup>117</sup> Both a Singaporean mother and father may pass their citizenship to their children wherever they are born.<sup>118</sup>		The Government of Singapore in its 2015 report to the CEDAW Committee informed that:<sup>119</sup> <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Women and men in Singapore have equal rights to acquire, change or retain their nationality;</li> <li>• Women and men in Singapore also have equal rights with respect to the nationality of their children whether they are born in Singapore or abroad.</li> </ul>	Both husbands and wives can be the sponsors for their spouses' applications for Singapore citizenship or permanent residence status.<sup>120</sup>
